A new dust storm has developed. It is located north of Alba (115W, +45N) and is roughly the same size as those that have occurred in the past few days. These dust storms have been occurring frequently recently, and we are closely monitoring the situation. Marl Lonsdale also transmitted observations; the IR image shows activity in the Meridiani region. The color image shows a faint, whitish haze over the Chryse region (35W, +10N).
